Job Classification Level:

II. Strategic Office Context and purpose for the job

The fundamental mission of UNICEF is to promote the rights of every child, everywhere. The equity strategy, emphasizes the most disadvantaged and excluded children and families, translates this commitment to children's rights into action. For UNICEF, equity means that all children have an opportunity to survive, develop, be protected and reach their full potential, without discrimination. To the degree that any child has an unequal chance in life — in its social, political, economic, civic and cultural dimensions — her or his rights are violated. There is growing evidence that investing in the health, education and protection of a society's most disadvantaged citizens — addressing inequity — will not only give all children the opportunity to fulfill their potential but also will lead to sustained growth and stability of countries. This is why the focus on equity is so vital. It accelerates progress towards realizing the human rights of all children, which is the universal mandate of UNICEF, as outlined by the Convention on the Rights of the Child, while also supporting the equitable development of nations.

Strategic office context

The Child Protection Section at UNICEF Zambia is seeking the support of a Junior Professional Officer (JPO) position who will provide critical technical support for the accelerated implementation of Zambia country's programme on child protection priorities with a special focus on prevention action at both national and sub national levels. This will ultimately ensure that children and adolescents, parents, communities, the Government, and other institutions that UNICEF works with have increased capacities to prevent violence, abuse and neglect and ensure that children are registered at birth. UNICEF has prioritized the implementation of community-based case management, which entails strengthening capacity of community volunteers to identify, prevent, support, and refer children who face or are risk of harm. The community volunteers receive supportive supervision from the community development assistants and district social welfare officers. UNICEF is also implementing the global programme to end child marriage that aims to support government efforts in ending child marriage and adolescent pregnancy by 2030. The interventions focus on transformative gender approaches to tackle unequal power relations that disadvantage girls and women in decision making. UNICEF also believes in working with the boys and men in the gender transformative agenda as they have a crucial role in deterring child marriage and adolescent pregnancy. Other priorities in prevention component of the child protection programs include social behavior change and communication through which communities reflect and take actions to prevent abuse and create demand for services including birth registration.

Zambia has 116 District Social Welfare Offices across the country. These government officers are crucial in the prevention and response to cases of child violence, abuse and exploitation and are mandated to implement programs on the care and protection of the most vulnerable children, whilst collaborating closely with police, prosecution, judiciary, and other child welfare and justice service providers. UNICEF works with the government and partners in preventing children from experiencing any form of violence as well as ensuring effective response where violence and abuse occurs. Additionally, UNICEF supports advancing legislation and in 2022, successfully supported the enactment of the Children's Code Act No 12, 2022, that is aligned to international protection standards. UNICEF Zambia's development priorities for the period between 2023 and 2027 are aligned to the government of Zambia development priorities as articulated in the 8th National Development Plan (NDP), the United Nations Sustainable Development Framework (UNSDF) and the Sustainable development Goals (SDGs). The country programme is also aligned with the goals of the UNICEF global Strategic Plan (2022-2025), global Child Protection Strategy 2021-2030 and the global Gender Action Plan (2022-2025). UNICEF Zambia aims to 'leave no child behind' by strengthening inter-dependence of programme components and with attention to key emerging issues such as climate change adaptation and public health emergency preparedness.

The JPO will be part of the child protection section staff and the wider UNICEF Zambia country office team working on systems strengthening to ensure Government and civil society organizations are implementing programs to ensure a protective environment for the wellbeing of children.

UNICEF has a comparative advantage in working with the relevant government Ministries in ensuring inter-sectoral coordination to address cross cutting priorities that impact on the child. The child protection officer (JPO) will work with the program technical leads within child protection section and other programme focal points in strengthening coordinated implementation of the new law. This is to ensure each of the sectors that have a stake in promoting the rights and well-being of children are operationalize the provisions of the children's act, thereby strengthening the institutional framework for child protection. Overall, the funding of this position will provide much-needed support for the organization's strengthened commitment to the promotion of child rights.

Purpose for the job:

UNICEF Zambia requires the services of a child protection officer (JPO) to further strengthen the professional personnel capacity to effectively support the Government of the Republic of Zambia and other partners in strengthening the preventive actions that communities and families should take to keep children safe from harm. This priority needs to expand beyond the current focus on addressing harmful practices in select districts to an effective and functional community-based child protection case management system across the country.

The child protection officer will provide much needed support in the operationalization of children's code act no 12, 2022 with a priority on community-based innovations to prevent violence and abuse of children. The act domesticates international and regional child rights and child protection standards and is poised to positively transform children's access to justice, prevention and response to violence and other forms of social norms and harmful practices like child marriage. Successful implementation of the new law will require intense coordination with different government ministries and departments, capacity building, monitoring, and reporting. Additionally, the child protection officer will work with the UNICEF Child Protection team, with the support of the Social Behavior Change and the Communications units in developing materials and facilitating sensitization of children and their families on the provisions in the act with a view to promoting demand driven protection services.

In the 2023-2027 country programme outline for Zambia, UNICEF has prioritized the implementation of a standard community case management tools and capacity building package, child safeguarding, social behaviour change, transformative gender actions, working with traditional leaders, creating demand for birth registration and child safeguarding. Under the direct supervision of the Head of Child Protection, and technical support of the P3 Child Protection Specialist, the child protection officer will support the design and implementation of innovative strategies to realize these priorities. The child protection officer will also facilitate capacity building and support to the Ministry of Community Development and Social Services and community volunteers in preventing children from abuse and violence and assist in documenting initiatives for replication and scale up. The child protection officer will therefore closely work with UNICEF Communications and Advocacy unit in documenting good practices and contribute to learning and experience sharing.

III. Key functions, accountabilities, and related duties/tasks:
